Planning

- The Planning Commission met on Wednesday, April 6 to consider several important projects. The Commission
  - recommended approval of the WonderBlock site plan;
  - recommended approval of an encroachment permit for the Q25 apartment project in Capitol Square;
  - approved a parking management plan for the Stockyard Exchange building;
  - recommended denial of a zoning code amendment that would have allowed certain apartment buildings on the BRT route to be converted to vacation rentals;
  - recommended approval of a zone change at 236 Porter Avenue from R-1-5 to R-1-6; and
  - found the CIP was consistent with the general plan.
  - The commission also recommended the city's parking management plan area be extended (south to 28th and east to Adams), and that the city acquire more park land as the city grows.
- The Mayor approved the Q25 encroachment and the WonderBlock projects. He denied a request for a temporary exception to allow a gym to go into industrial space at 2679 Midland Drive.
- Planning staff presented changes to the R-3 height limits to the City Council. The council adopted the changes.
